FAR FROM HOME - music by Justin Arey, Lyrics Steven Stern copyright 2005

Here is far from home,
A place not quite familiar but not unknown.
She was drawn along by hope
Lit like the light on an unanswered phone.

She is following
A sound unheard, a word
That she's named her heartstring.
And every day seems one day closer
To the end of her secret wandering

CHORUS: when she finally finds her feet
Upon the street
That she's moved forward on.
Though every step seemed like
The right leap at the time,
She's far from home.

It was never a home,
An empty place encased by wood and stone and,
He blew in just like a breeze,
To leave, but not before a careless seed was sown,

She is following
And that's enough for now
The motion's everything.
And every day seems one day closer
To the end of her secret wandering

CHORUS: when she finally finds her feet
Upon the street
That she's moved forward on.
Though every step seemed like
The right leap at the time,
She's far from home.

She's run far from home
From her messed up life
In the middle of nowhere and
She's not real sure just why she left

She didn't take to big towns
Nobody noticed her,
Nobody thought of her, and
She couldn't make a home with that

Far from Destiny, is a
Mystery she never read
Hurt by words she overheard, in the Tavern down the street, now she's Far from anything, she's Far from anyone, she's so
Far away it seems, she's so
Far from home, and now it's like...
